Canadian National Specialty Best of Breed

Ted's baby brother is following in his footsteps.

At his first show in the US out with Deb, he took a 5 pt. major under judge Dorothy Welsh. He then went to Canada to take not only Winners Dog but

Best of Breed as well over quite a few nice specials. He was also Best of Winners at the Booster Show. Thank you to two breeder judges, Mr. Edd Bivin and Mr. Leslie Rogers.

Quincy sends congratulations to Theresa Bainbridge DVM on D&H's Somerset's Destiny, and Dottie O'Donnell (PA) on D&H's Christmas Star.

Multiple Best of Breed and Group Placement Winner

Ted is pictured winning the points at the Canadian Pomeranian Club Specialty last year under breeder/judge Mr. Ken Miller. Since that time he finished his Canadian championship in three shows, taking Best of Breed over specials and going on to a Group 3rd. He also has had Best of Breed and Group placements from the classes in the East and West coast of the U.S. and Canada. He was ranked #6 Pom in the Northeast in limited showing.

Many thanks to the judges who have recognized Ted's qualities.

Marvel started his 1997 show season with another Group 1. He will occasionally be hitting the show ring later this summer. Watch for him. Marvel's son, MNM's Captain TJ of Cheyenne only lacks 1 point of finishing his championship. Watch for him this summer, too.

Marvel continues to sire very promising puppies for us.

Your Attention, Please!

In the May issue of The Pomeranian Registry, I featured Darlys Flaata and her wonderful Damata Poms. There was a tragic accident October 18 in which her upper kennel was burned to the ground and many of the dogs you read about are now gone. The grief from the loss of her companions and breeding program aside, it will be very costly to rebuild. A trust fund has been established and if you can contribute in whatever way possible, it would be most appreciated. Make checks payable and send to: Darlys Flaata Trust Fund, c/o Cynthia Bradley, 1908 NE 86th, Portland, OR 97220-5508, (503) 253-8499. e-mail: soarer@heva.net.com

Eve Smail of Toybox Pomeranians

Am./Irish Ch. Mullerkazarsungold Illusion of Toybox and Eve.

I was born into a non pet-owning family, which most likely explains my obsession with animals. I live six miles east of Edinburgh in Central Scotland in a country cottage surrounded by fields and no neighbors.

I have a cat boarding business with a license to board 115 cats. I bought my first Pom in 1976 having seen one and fallen in love with them. I had bred Arabian horses and Persian cats with much success, but my love of Poms took off in a big way. My first show dog was purchased from the world famous Hadleigh Kennel. I just phoned up Gladys Dyke and asked her for one, as I had heard she had the best. Little did I know that you just didn't phone up Mrs. Dyke and ask for a dog. My mentor, Astrid Ogilvie of the Pakov Poms, couldn't believe that I was going down to London to pick up a ten month old wolf sable dog. She kept saying to me I must have gotten a different Mrs. Dyke! Astrid is still a good friend and a lady whom I had first contacted to use her stud dog. She and I went to pick up this gorgeous little dog, but he did not like to show and I never got him to breed yet I have never regretted buying him. Sadly a heart attack took him at five years old.

Next I got a super typey cream dog who was all Cynpeg breeding. I knew before I bought him that he would not show but he was very well bred. I decided to have him and he produced Toybox Small Print. Although he was not a champion, Small Print did a lot of winning for me and produced several champions, including the famous Ch. Toybox Platignum Phantom who has champion kids around the world and was Top Pom and Top Stud dog several years on the trot for owner Sue Smith.

Toybox Small Print, not a champion himself but the sire of many famous champions including Ch. Toybox Platignum Phantom.

of Sueacres Poms. In one of those years, I had the Top Pom in Britain, Southern Ireland, Denmark and Finland with dogs I had sold. I have been Top British Breeder several times and had Top Pom, Top Stud Dog and Top Puppy several times also and have bred countless champions worldwide, including Ireland, Iceland, Finland, Germany, Australia, New Zealand, Portugal, Denmark, Germany, and Sweden to the great satisfaction of their owners. I have always tried to send my best.

I decided that I needed new bloodlines and bought from Anna LaFortune in the U.S., Am. /Irish Ch. Mullerkazarsungold Illusion of Toybox, who was top Pom in Ireland and a multi Best in Show winner. I have bred him to several of my bitches and it is his get that I am winning with now. He is nearly 11 years old and we have puppies due from him now.

I also bought from Fran Stoll, American and Canadian Ch. Stolanne's Highway to Heaven at Toybox. He got his Irish title and was Top Pom in 1995 and is a multi Best in Show winner. I showed him in the UK only once where he got his first Championship Certificate (you need three for the title) but by this time he was nearly seven and sick of the showing. He has been a good sire for me and although I have had only ten puppies from him, I have just finished two of his daughters to their English title within the last few weeks. He has a Finnish champion son, an Icelandic champion son, and an Australian champion son. I am hoping to send something from him back to Fran later this year. She has been so patient waiting for it.

At present I keep about 14 Poms. I think when you look real closely, the people who keep huge numbers of Poms on't have any more winners pro rata than smaller dedicated breeders, and the small breeders' dogs have more attention and a better life I am sure. Quality and quantity don't come hand in hand. Dogs were never meant to be battery farmed and sold off in bulk job lots.

My dogs have a purpose built kennel with two to a pen and free access to their runs 23 hours a day, weather permitting. The show dogs and puppies live in a small room at the back of my kitchen with access to a big run during the day.

In the UK, if you keep more than three breeding bitches you must be licensed by the local authority and they tell you what facilities you need and inspect you yearly along with a vet. I think it's a good thing and have been licensed for 19 years without a hitch.

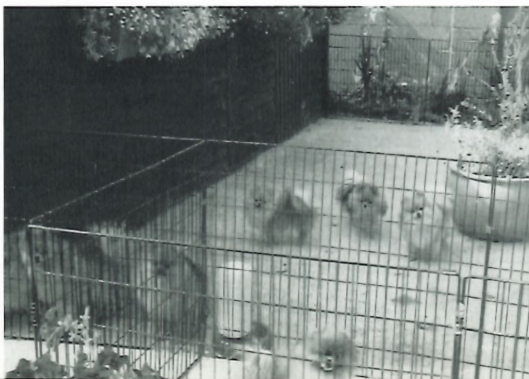

Not only do I show, but I judge and one of my greatest pleasures was to judge the American Pomeranian Club Summer Specialty. I have also judged the Pom Club show in Sweden, Ireland and Taiwan. In the UK we have many breeder judges as well as all-rounders and there are advantages to each type of judge. Sometimes a dog will have many wins under breeder judges, but be dumped under all-rounders, maybe because the all-rounders just will not forgive the faults the breeder judges ignore, and sometimes people do win under their friends. Looking at the other side of the coin, a dog will have a big win under an all-rounder and then never win anything worthwhile again, so it is swings and roundabouts. They say every dog has its day but some just have it when they shouldn't.

Living in Scotland has its drawbacks in that I do have a lot of travelling to do, usually facing a 700 to 1000 mile round trip to most of the major shows. We have three Championship shows in Scotland with Ch. on offer. Everything is in England. The British Kennel Club seems to think the United Kingdom stops 20 miles north of London. No wonder the Scots are voting on its own Parliament today. (Stop Presses: WE GOT IT!)

I have had no real problem with coats or skin. Some of the American dogs I have seen and judged seem to lack the real Pom coat. They have no length of guard hair and seem just to have lots of undercoat. I cross my American lines with the English lines, usually no more than 75% American, and it really works. This way I get the best of both worlds. The American Lines are so alien to the English lines, you almost get a mixed animal. For example, I bred one of my beautiful bitches to one of my imported males, expecting great things. Sadly, I lost the male so I can't try other combinations, but the two puppies I got are awful. I won't even show them to my Pom friends here because they are so terrible. I'm going to keep the puppies (they are both bitches) and see if by using another imported dog, I can't get back the quality that I know to be there.

I have had the usual undershot mouths, but this is due to trying to get the face too short. Get sensible and try for a nice balanced face with expression and you don't get this problem. I have also had some patella problems, but my stock is

Irish Ch. Toybox Bubbling Over

(UK Ch. Toybox Firecracker x Toybox Dancing Joy)

The Toybox Poms owned and loved by me - Irish Ch. Toybox Bubbling Over, "Bubbles Sueacres Nutmeg, "Pippa" (orange sable female sired by UK Ch. Yellow Rose plans to continue the Toybox line in Texas, but their Scottish origin is always remembered with love. Thank you, Eve, for allowing us to own such gorgeous Poms.

Pippa is now bred to Bubbles and we are hoping for some darling puppies in November. We'll be playin' the bagpipes in Red Oak when they arrive!

known for its soundness and I don't keep ripples no matter what they look like. That works too. I think people should talk more and not try to hide their problems. The "I never had that" syndrome doesn't help anyone.

I have imported about 10 dogs and the worst of that is the quarantine of six months. You can go and see them every day if you like, but it's too long for them not to be at home with you. I think that it may soon drop to three or four months from rabies controlled countries and 30 days from rabies free countries. Exporting is not a problem, but to the Far East I think the dogs' future is sometimes very uncertain. After a bad experience, none of my dogs will ever go again.

My philosophy is not to kid yourself about your dogs, and not to allow your dogs to suffer in the pursuit of your hobby, or in some cases, someone else's business. I depise people who give tiny stitches re-created c-sections, or keep them in cages and mass produce them.

I think contracts which spell out the exact specifications of the sale are essential and I think this is even more important between friends where a handshake on a deal can lead to many losses, especially to the friendship itself. I have bought dogs from so-called friends and been badly ripped off, so I know whereof I speak. I also never sell Poms to homes with children. You wouldn't give your best china to children to play with and that's how I view my Poms. I sell my pets on a 48 hour vet check and return contract. The genetic problems of the breed are spelled out, plus a disclaimer must be signed saying they accept the fact that the breed has the possibility of these defects appearing in later life and that they will not hold the breeder responsible. For show dogs, I usually don't sell until full dentition is in and would take back any show dog if it developed anything which prevented it from being shown, provided a show price had been paid.

Like every one of you, I have had times when I was giving up, but I just adore Poms - pure and simple - and can never see myself being without them.

I would like to be remembered as someone who bred nice sound Poms with personality plus, and who would help anyone in trouble regardless of any ill feelings we may have had in the past.

In Canada we are very spread out and although there are shows in most areas very weekend, we don't have big breed numbers. That means, although we don't have as many Poms to compete with, our winners have to be good enough to place in the Group to finish their titles.

Here we are three quarters of the way through 1997 and although I can't tell you who will be Top Pom, it look like last year's dog, Ch. Starfire's I'm Sexy Too, owned by Marie Jacques and bred by Tony Cabrera is making his way to that top spot again. His guy continues his winning ways with several more Best in Show wins recently, adding to an already impressive show record.

The Canadian National Specialty was held in Kingston, Ontario in July, judged by Mr. Edd Bivin. Mr. Bivin chose Dover Colihouse Rogo's M.E. (by Am. Ch. Finch's He Walks on Water ex Rogo's Munchkin from Oz) bred by Patricia Foley, Katherine Hartz and M. Rogozinski. This beautiful deep orange dog went from the classes to Best of Breed. Best of Opposite Sex was the black and tan bitch, Can. Am. Ch. Chriscendo Colour Picture (by Chriscendo Colour My World ex Chriscendo Coquille) bred and owned by Christine Hartz. Winners Bitch was Chriscendo Come Dancing (by Am. Ch. Millamor's Dance of Sourwood ex Ch. Chriscendo Centrefold). Sweepstakes was won by Jolvin's Legacy of Ginger (by Am. Ch. Heartland's Top Notch Tradition ex Can. Am. Raglan's Ginger Snaps, bred and owned by Melvin and Joan Beech).

As you can see from this list of winners, many of our Canadian dogs, both at this Specialty and in general, are based on American bloodlines as opposed to English or European ones. That is pretty much standard, although several kennels have been breeding for so long that the dogs are certainly Canadian bred. I find that many Canadian breeders are "biting the bullet" and shipping their bitches off to top producers and it is paying off. It's not easy to pack those little Poms off to another country, go through the hassle of customs, to say nothing of the "brutal" American dollar, and the costs of shipping and air fare, but it's a necessary evil in order to improve our lines. Certainly people in larger breeds think the fees are cheap for Toys, but I also think we get a lot less for our money. So often, our efforts bring us only one or even no puppies. But it seems there are Canadian breeders for whom it's paying off. I am so proud to see these people attending and winning at American specialties. It's great!

I had the pleasure of meeting Lisa Stasiuk from Saskatchewan at the Specialty. Lisa is working very hard, along with her husband, Mike, to produce some excellent dogs. They do not own more than half a dozen Poms but they drove all the way to Missouri to breed their girl to "Jake" (Ch. Rock N Tradition of Oakridge) and were rewarded with three puppies. They have already finished all three!

Joan and Melvin Beech are producing some lovely puppies. They won the Super Match in Ohio with their little guy who won the Sweeps at our National and I am sure you will hear lots from him in the future. And the Beaches love to show! That is so important. No one knows you have nice dogs if they have never seen them. The Beeches have won the Breed and Best of Winners at the Baltimore Specialty with two Canadian bred Poms and they work hard to finish their dogs in both Canada and the U.S.

John and Darlene Boyd of Chinadolls have also had some nice ones and are selling all over the world right now. One they sold recently, Chinadoll's Avenger, owned by Bev Carter in Newfoundland, just won a Best in Show for his owner.

Doug Stratton finished Peppipom's

Spirit of Sunterra this spring with a couple of Groups. She is co-owned and bred by Loretta Petersen. You may remember that Doug finished his Ch. Sunterra Sweet Seduction at the Columbia Specialties on the West Coast last year. He is a very small breeder with only 5 dogs who concentrates on quality not quantity.

Pam Dodsworth and husband Larry Fox are breeders I guarantee you will hear more from. Another small kennel, they have been working very hard and it is paying off. They have a darling puppy out now sired by "Jake" that has everyone drooling! Her name is Ch. Foxworth Five Star Tradition.

Tammy Corbin is doing well out west with Ch. Corleah's Unconditional Love. Tammy also owned Can. Am. Ch Whiddon's Raise It High who was a Best in Show winner. Riser now lives with S Goddard of Tim Sue.

Carol Graham, recently retired from handling, now has the time to pursue something she has always loved: Pom. Believe it or not, she has already bred Best in Show winner named Chrystalton Alisa, and there's more where she came from.

Way out on the west coast, Colleen Franks, a very well known Pom breeder who works mainly with Great Elms line has been doing well with her Ch. Cheyenne's September Dawn.

That's a quick overview of who is winning in Canada. There are many more and certainly more to come. Sorry if I've left out any Best in Show winners. Keep an eye on the north for the Canadians!

How to improve your diet by preparing healthy dog food.

The Dragonfly Ranch: Tropical Fantasy Lodging, Kona Coast, Hawaii.

You may wonder, “Why a dog food recipe?” One day, a guest returning from a long swim with the wild dolphins near my &B, smelled my cooking and asked, “What’s this?”

I explained that my naturopathic vet from Kauai taught me to cook fresh food for my dogs—1/4 protein, 1/4 vegetables and 1/2 grain. “This particular batch,” I told her, “has ground turkey, garden greens and quinoa (an Aztec grain).”

“Can I have some?” Ellen asked. I gladly shared it with her to discover that she loved and asked for the recipe. Here it is:

Dragonfly Ranch Basic Pampered Pomeranian Stew:

3 cups well-rinsed organic quinoa (or rice, millet, oats etc.) with 6 cups boiling water in a rice cooker.

Diced onion cooked slowly with garlic and ground turkey (or fish, chicken, pork or lamb) for several minutes.

Add finely chopped broccoli and grated carrots (or other vegetables) for a few minutes.

When everything is cooked, put it together and stir. Remove a serving size which for my poms is 1/4 cup morning and evening). To each serving I add small amounts of olive oil, powered spirulina, seaweed flakes, and nutritional yeast flakes. I also throw in my papaya seeds that have a rich covering of enzymes to assist with digestion. My vet, Dr. Ihor Basko, recommends adding a raw egg every 4 days. He said that, years ago when Kauai was hit by hurricane Iniki, he and his neighbors lived on the dog food stored in his freezer!

Dragonfly Ranch Quick-fix (not-so-pampered) Pomeranian Stew:

When I’m pressed for time, using Dr. Basko’s formula of 1/4 meat, 1/4 vegetables and 1/2 grain, I combine leftovers from the fridge. If there are no leftovers, I open a can of tuna fish, heat some frozen veggies, and mix it with organic rolled oats and boiled water. Topping it off with a dollop of oil, a dash of spirulina, dulse, yeast powder and vitamins—it becomes a fine dinner for the pooches in less than 5 minutes.

Learning to eat as well as my dogs

Since I love my dogs and they are my primary companions, I want them to live long, healthy lives. For that reason, I want them to eat the most nutritious food possible. Even though I’m knowledgeable about nutrition, I find I’m not inclined to do much cooking for myself. But whenever I have time, I do my best to create the healthiest meals I can for my dogs.

Remembering a cute little book “Are You as Happy as Your Dog?” written by Allen Cohen in collaboration with a Dragonfly Ranch offspring, “Professor” Munchie, I ask myself, “Should I eat as healthfully as my dogs?” The answer is, “Why not?”

Living on the Kona Coast of Hawaii, it is easy to maintain a year round garden that has greens high in calcium—sweet potato vine, seven top turnip, collards and kale. These are things that, 1.) make for strong little Pomeranian legs and 2.) combat osteoporosis. While I might not feel like bothering to prepare food for myself alone, I'm highly motivated to care for my "babies." When I go to the garden for greens for the dog food, I gather extra for myself, put it in the electric steamer and turn the knob to 5 minutes. When I use the rice cooker to make quinoa (the "Cadillac of grains" with 16% protein), I make a big pot with plenty of extra for me. And when I go to the fish market for scraps for my dogs, I buy fresh fish for myself. The ultimate recipe I have yet concocted for my "wee little ones" is Dragonfly Ranch Most Pampered Pomeranian Stew. I happily share it here with you.

Dragonfly Ranch Most Pampered Pomeranian Stew.

Using chicken necks saved for me by my friends at Billy Bob's Park and Pork, I make a big chicken broth base. I clean off the chicken meat and put it in the broth, (saving the vertebrae for teeth cleaning "treats" doled out for good behavior).

To this base I add the "innards" of the chicken along with some chicken meat, turkey or fish and cook this until it is almost done. Then I simmer it together with diced onion, minced garlic and a small amount of root vegetable (like sweet potato)—all Pomeranian bite sized. Holding to the proportions recommended by Dr. Basko, I then combine this all with the cooked grain and fresh green veg- etables. When the greens are young and tender, I simply cut them sliver fine without cooking out the enzymes. I mix it together and let it all "harmonize" for a short time.

If I make a large amount at once, I store some in the freezer. The rest I keep in the refrigerator, warming daily portions on the stove. (I no longer use the microwave since a guest told me it destroys enzymes.)

In truth, my dogs have let me know that they much prefer the fresh cooked food, especially the when the greens turn that bright jewel green "eat me" color. My dogs don't mind my heating the refrigerated portion for them. But when I get down to using the frozen part, they look at me and say "This isn't as appetizing as the fresh stuff" but we'll reluctantly eat it."

Just prior to serving, I add the papaia seeds, finely chopped fresh basil, flax seed oil, dulse leaves, yeast powder, spirulina, and dog vitamins.

I'm just hoping that by sharing my experience with my dogs, other dog lovers might also become inspired to cook healthier food for themselves. Not yet having gotten out the candles, turned on the music and dressed for the occasion, I'm sharing these extraordinary meals with my "best friends"—but I wouldn't be surprised if that's the next step.

Showing Your Pomeranian "Aussie" Style

By Denise Leo
Australia

Under the umbrella of the Australian National Kennel Control, each state in Australia has its own controlling body to register puppies, handle transfers, etc. Many of these controlling bodies now own showgrounds and have indoor showings for the comfort of their members, but most Australian shows are still held at outdoor venues and of course, rain, hail, sunshine or snow, the show must go on!

The Judge may be lucky to have a beach umbrella erected over the examining table, but usually ends up cold and wet on miserable days and very, very sunburned on hot, sunny days.

Dog exhibitors being very innovative people, usually put up some sort of shelter for dog and owner. Smallish camping tents that allow the exhibitor to stand in comfort used to be the standard answer for the energetic dog exhibitor who was prepared to carry and erect a tent ringside. Other exhibitors just managed with a beach umbrella and on wet days attached a tarpaulin to one side of the umbrella and hoped and prayed for a rainbow to quickly appear on the horizon.

When I first started exhibiting my Pomeranians in the 1970s, I purchased a beautiful bright orange beach umbrella, which was great until I attended a show in wet weather. I erected my beautiful bright orange beach umbrella close to the entrance to the toy ring and sat to watch the judging. Two ladies with Maltese came along and asked if they could put their dogs on my table under the umbrella while waiting to be judged. Unfortunately the beach umbrella started to drip orange dye onto these exquisitely groomed doggies. What a disaster to have happen within minutes of Maltese being called into the ring!

After this mishap I decided to purchase one of these new fangled umbrella covers or tents I had seen. These umbrella tents slip easily over the umbrella when at half mast. You then fully erect the umbrella and peg around the bottom of the tent to the ground with tent pegs. I was also hoping for the added advantage of being invisible to Maltese exhibitors!

My umbrella tent was all nylon and a light orange color (thank goodness the dye did not run with this one), but on rather windy days it nearly became airborne a couple of times. My husband accompanied me to a two day dog show in windy, rainy weather and he spent the two days holding onto the umbrella tent. He kept muttering something about never, never coming to another dog show and that I was to never put our name on the show equipment. He also, in a very, very impolite manner, expressed concern about the show paraphernalia taking to the skies, maiming some innocent party, and after the court case we would be homeless and penniless!

Mouth Trouble in Poms

by Carla Timmons

Like other Toys, the Pom may have entition problems. There are many factors t work here. Poms are often fed soft foods nd their owners are reluctant to have regul- ar dental prophylaxis due to a mistaken ear of general anesthesia. Poms are also rone to retained deciduous (baby) teeth hich can interfere with bite and hygiene.

We, as breeders, have drastically hortened their muzzles in the last 15 years nd this has led to overcrowding of the outh in some cases. Tooth size, number nd shape have not changed but the teeth ust now go into a smaller area than pre- iously. Their life spans are fairly long and ome, quite frankly, just out live their teeth! ave a bitch of 18 years and even though er dental care has been good, she has nly 7 teeth now. In fact, proper dental care ill prolong any animals life.

PART 1: THE PUP

A quick review of the canine mouth tells us that most pups of 6 weeks have 28 deciduous teeth. At 8 weeks the permanent teeth begin to come in, starting with the incisors and finishing at 7 months with the molars, giving 42 permanent teeth.

Some examples of hereditary bad bites or malocclusions include:

Over bite - where the lower jaw is shorter than the upper. Here you can see a gap between the upper and lower incisors. An over bite is not normal for any breed. To remember, picture Val Kilmer or Dracula!

Under bite - the lower teeth protude n front of the upper teeth. To remember, picture Jim Carrey! The underbite is now considered to be familial (running in families) and not totally due to dominant or recessive genes. This explains the bitch with a slight underbite having a litter of pups with perfect bites when out crossed to another line.

Base Narrow - the lower jar is too narrow with the bottom teeth leaning inwards. This condition is usually rectified with a tooth plane.

Wry mouth - where one side of the skull or jaw grows asymmetrically giving an ugly, crooked appearance. Method of inheritance is polygenic and strongly hereditary.

Missing teeth - can happen happen in the Pom breed (indeed all breeds) due to recessive genetics. Pups as young as 9 weeks may be x-rayed (skull x-rays only). This will ascertain tooth bud formation without radiation-development problems if you need to know whether adult tooth buds are present. For young pups Valium and/or Ketamine sedation may be used in place of gas anesthesia to assure the pup is as still as possible for a good picture to be taken.

Supernummary teeth - These extra teeth can cause severe overcrowding and rotting of adult teeth and MUST be removed.

Tooth color itself is inherited. Off white teeth may be bleached and whitened. Personally, I don't feel that this is altering the appearance of a show animal. Just a form of a little extra grooming. Some of these bites may be corrected by bands and braces fitted by a Dental Board certified vet. Orthodontics is reserved for animals that are not show animals. Canine teeth will move in weeks or months as opposed to the lengthy orthodontic therapy in humans.

A word of caution to breeders here. Many pet catalogs carry small rubber bands which are supposedly used to move a misplaced tooth. Do not resort to using them! They can cause severe gum and tongue damage and are ineffective. If swalwed, major surgery can be the result.

There are other causes of bad bites that are not hereditary and if caught early (9-12 weeks) enough and treated; will result in a natural, good bite.

Anterior cross bite - occurs when 1 or more lower incisors are positioned in front of the upper incisors. This is not a genetic defect. It may be caused by retained primary teeth or impacted roots. Extraction of retained teeth will often correct this common problem. This can also be a direct, acquired problem due to tug of war games. May also be acquired by a pup who constantly pulls a litter mate's tail.

Interlocking teeth - a slight underbite is the result. If the deciduous teeth causing the problem are pulled at an early enough age the bite will correct itself in 50-100% of cases. This is not a genetic problem so interception here is allowed with often a happy outcome. If a pup of 10 weeks shows signs of 'going off' now is the time to see a dental specialist. Do not delay.

Retained deciduous teeth - baby teeth and adult teeth should never occupy the same space. Some vets will advise waiting to see if the teeth fall out by 6-7 months. Many times they don't. In my opinion not much is gained by waiting except perhaps worn adult teeth and an imperfect bite. With modern anesthetics there is little to fear and much to gain. In the case of a pup destined for the show ring it is extremely worthwhile to get a referral to a vet who is board certified in dental care. If an owner is at all worried about anesthesia on a tiny pup of a tender age it is worthwhile discussing this with the vet first. A chamber induction should be possible to avoid overdosing of gaseous agents during the excitement phase.

As an owner there are many things you can do to preserve your pups teeth and bite.

First and foremost, breed good mouths. Begin watching a pup's bite closely at 8 weeks. Do not forget to view the mouth from the front as well as sides.

Viewed from the front (with the jaw closed and the lips lifted) all pups should have 3 teeth on each side directly below the septum of the nose. This midline match will show whether the jaws are growing symmetrically. Time is short if a natural, good bite starts to change. The canine dental specialist should be seen when the pup is 9-12 weeks of age if you even suspect a problem is developing. Feed crunchy foods as well as soft. Most dogs will happily consume a raw carrot. No, not bones or chicken wings. These are faddish at the moment but can do untold damage to Poms. Believe me, it is not a case of if but when the damage will occur. And it will. Leave the bones to the big breeds. Even that worries me. Offer Poms toys and chews that have peridontal ridges.

Discourage tug of war games and tail pulling promptly. As thumb sucking in humans can move teeth so can this in dogs, and twice as quickly. Find and use the best dental specialist you can afford. Massage puppy gums twice a week. It stimulates blood and saliva flow, helps loosen baby teeth and allows permanent teeth to erupt through the gum line. This simple practice will keep you aware of what is happening in a puppy's mouth. A little peanut butter, chicken stock or vegemite on the finger will make it a pleasurable experience for the pup. Be wary of commercial high protein puppy foods. This can encourage the different rates of jaw growth that happen normally. Most Pom pups do well on adult rations which have a lower protein amount than puppy meals. Lastly, if you brush your dogs teeth do not use pastes containing Fluoride. Toxicity in Poms from Fluoride is a very real danger!

Part 2: THE ADULT

It is not unusual in the Pom to see a young dog of 4 years with loose or missing teeth. This is sad as, for the most part, it is avoidable. Tooth retention is important to digestion, health and longevity. It is worth striving for. Your regular vet will be trained in dental prophylaxis (cleaning) ow to make sure he is compact and that his tail is flat and straight on his back. This requires, of course, a high set tail.

The rear quarters, as with all of the breeds, must balance the front in angulation. Touch these furry little legs to make sure you're looking at bone structure, not just fur. As you move to the rear of the dog, you want to see hocks that are perpendicular to the ground and legs that are now bowed, but parallel to each other. The Pom feet must be, and usually are, compact, well arched, and not turned in or out.

As you are going over this exhibit, your hands will know if the coat is correct, double with the soft dense undercoat. The guard hair stands off from the body, and your eye will hope to find that the most abundant area of coat is in the neck, chest and forequarters, giving him the outline so typical of the breed. Most of the dogs in the ring today will have their coats trimmed for neatness. This can be done skillfully so the Pom doesn't look like he's had a meeting with a hedge clipper.

Now it's time to evaluate his gait coming and going. As he goes down and back you will expect to see legs that move freely and with vigor. The legs are thrown neither in nor out. If the front is incorrect, you will see labored movement, or elbows that rock in and out as he goes. This probably confirms what you already found when he was on the table.

I like to examine expression when he returns to me after the down and back routine. Bait or a noise will cause him to look up and it is at this time that I expect to see the "foxy" look - curious and intelligent.

Now for a trip around the ring alone. Again, a neat little package full of confidence, balanced, reaching and driving, coat tightly placed on his body because of its density. This is also a good time to make a visual comparison of the class to evaluate size. While overall quality is more important than size, we must be careful not to reward possible giants in this lovely toy breed.

The Pom is a delightful animal. He is a "big dog" in a very small package. Don't be afraid to go over him completely. His parts are put together in much the same way as other dogs, but you must get into and under the coat to make that determination.

But most important, enjoy the Pom. They're fun to judge, and throughout the country, there are some good ones, which like rich cream, will come to the top.

heavy fluoridated water, filtration of a pups drinking water is a good idea.

- The canine lucky enough to live in the 90's has almost all the benefits that humans have in dental advancements.
- Fractured teeth can be rebuilt, a dying tooth saved, many bad bites corrected and teeth whitened. Your local vet is trained in routine treatments. Ask him/her for a referral to a trained Dental specialist for anything out of the ordinary. Expensive yes, but a real requirement for a valuable show winner.

Charlotte, NC September 25, 1997

by Brenda Segelken

"Nothing could be finer than to be in Carolina," except to be in Carolina with the Pom friends, surrounded by over 160 beautiful Pomeranians and attending the APC Summer Specialty. A grand time indeed!

Southern hospitality began the moment we arrived at the Carowinds Ramada Inn, with the polite caring staff. We looked forward to a pleasant comfortable stay.

The shows were held at the Piedmont Kennel Club Showplace. A lovely showsite, built and maintained for judging seminars, training sessions, dog shows, and other dog related activities.

The APC Sweepstakes (54 entries) began with judge Mr. Richard H. Nachman examining a beautiful class of 6 - 9 puppy dogs. The superb quality continued throughout the Sweeps. The Grand Sweepstakes Winner, from the 6 - 9 month Bitch class, was Patricia's Passion Play, owned by Pati Danielson.

Dr. Harry Smith began his tough assignment at noon with a total entry of 143 Pomeranians. His final choice of the day for Best of Breed put the Veteran Bitch, Ch. Glen Iris Distant Lady, co-owned by Joel Taylor and R G Garrard.

T Bones on the Lake, an excellent choice by the Central Carolina Pomeranian Club, hosted the APC Banquet that evening. T Bones actually sits on a beautiful lake in South Carolina. A grand time..... the decor, view of the lake, excellent food, new Pom friends, "entertainment" and a fun auction.

So what really could be finer than a Pom in Carolina? How about 3 more exciting days of Carolina, Poms, Central Carolina's Specialty and 2 all breed dog shows! The class placements were as follows:

MNM Pomeranians

At Stud

The MNM studs continue to produce in full force. Inquiries are invited regarding breeding to our champion and near-champion studs, as well as to the purchase of their puppies.

Pet puppies currently available.

Congratulations!

On the acquisition of MNM's Magical Revelation to Mari Iffland of Mar Bil Poms. Elvira is a super sound black girl.

Many thanks

To Gail Rainey, Raine's Country Cottage, for allowing us to have and co-own Raine's N MNM's Playing Tag. This orange sable girl is super sound and from whom we expect great things. Also, for the loan and co-own of Raine's Charity Has It's Own Rewards. This girl is very sweet, and true joy and a super producer.

Our thanks and appreciation to all of you for the calls, cards and letters resulting from the loss of our home and all possessions due to fire.

to the rescue. Uncle Reg is 81 years young and Aunt Ethel is 76. On Ethel's old Singer treadle sewing machine they made me the perfect umbrella tent, sewn from very heavy plastic ground sheets. This tent withstands all weather and is simple and easy to erect over my umbrella. Uncle Reg pulled the ground sheets through the machine while Aunt Ethel treadled away. The result is a perfect umbrella shelter for my dogs and myself. At shows I have had so many people inquire about where to purchase a special umbrella tent like mine. I have to inform them that my tent is a one-off designer model made by my Uncle Reg and Aunt Ethel. Best of all, it hardly takes up any room in my car. This is very important as we seem to have an unwritten law in Australia that the smaller the dog you exhibit, the more dogs and equipment you must take with you when attending shows. Of course, if you are a senior citizen this requirement seems to be at least doubled if not tripled!

Umbrella tents in nylon with the front made of plastic fly wire to stop the tent from becoming airborne are now readily available. The problem of course is which way the rain will come from all day.

So on wet days in Australia, we sit ringside in our umbrella tents, grooming our Pomeranians having a great time as we watch the poor Judge and Steward out in the rain, hoping for that elusive rainbow to appear before Poms are called to the ring. Pomeranians are judged closest to the Best in Group judging so in wet weather there is always a panic to dry your dog before Best in Group. As you desperately try to dry your dog, you think an "a" should be added in front of Pomeranian so the breed would be judged first among the toy breeds, thus giving Pom exhibitors time to properly prepare their dogs for group judging.

Next weekend, guess where we will be? Yes, at another dog show doing it all again. See you there!

Back Cover Story: A TRIBUTE TO SPECIAL FRIENDS

There are things that every breeder and exhibitor dreams of winning -- a Best in Show, a National Specialty. For me, it was to get a Group placement on my chocolate special, Ch. Heartland's In The Nicka Time. It was a long haul for Nicky and me, even to get his championship. It's real tough showing an exotic color against the quality orange Poms that are out there today, as those of you that have done it know.

When I set out for the Pomeranian Specialty in North Carolina the end of September, it was to show the Pom world a quality dog that happened to be chocolate in color. I knew whatever else happened there a quality Pomeranian would be appreciated. Not only was this goal accomplished, but a dream came true. Out of tough competition with a large entry, Nicky made the cut everyday but one, and on September 27, at the Columbia KC show, out of an entry of 105 Poms including 18 specials, Ch. Heartland's In The Nicka Time went Best of Breed over top ranked dogs under just Mr. Roy Holloway, and then on to a Group 3 under Mr. Frank Sabella! I was in seventh heaven and was so proud of this special little boy. He sure did his mom proud.

There aren't enough words to say how moved I was by the support for Nicky that was given by friends, fellow Pom exhibitors, and other Pom lovers. This truly was a day where a statement was made for the Pomeranian breed by one and all.
